Catalonia has a hugely diverse and rugged territory. From picturesque beaches to peaks more than 3,000 meters high. Catalonia’s public transport network is mainly based on the railway network that has been expanding for over 170 years.

The network has 1866 km of rail lines, of which almost 400 km belong to the high-speed network that connects France with the Iberian Peninsula. In 2019, just before the pandemic, the public transport system carried more than 1.12 billion passengers, thanks to an integrated system working in its large metropolitan area.

Public Transport passengers value and are highly satisfied with the urban and interurban public transport services.

In 2001, the Integrated Fare System was implemented in the Metropolitan Region of Barcelona. It is an agreement between administrations and transport operators which led to the creation of a common ticket. With this integrated ticket, users can move, in a territory organised by crowns, using the different modes of transport.

This system forms the basis of a sustainable mobility model, which unites the territory and gives access to the great infrastructures that connect Catalonia and Spain with the world: the Mediterranean Corridor, the Port and Airport of Barcelona.

Did you know?
Barcelona is a global leader in terms of accessibility, close to 100% of all public transport stations and vehicles are accessible.
Bright Light of the City

The event will highlight how public transport is on a mission to support better urban living and a revived traveller experience for the benefit of all. Public transport modes including shared and collective modes of transport are continuously evolving. The Global Public Transport Summit is the ideal place to discover all these evolutions and the latest solutions which are enhancing the lives of people in cities.

The UITP Summit will address:

- The decarbonisation of public transport, and the challenges related to energy and climate change.

- A resilient urban public transport system and a resilient financial and business model to deal with ongoing crises such as pandemics and the climate emergency.

- The digital transformation of our sector and the impact of hyper-connectivity and data sovereignty in mobility.

- Public Transport as the solution of a better, healthier and more inclusive urban life.

From operational and technological solutions, to restoring passenger confidence and ensuring a healthier urban life for all, the Summit will be the place to demonstrate that public transport is the Bright Light of the City.
